Living Well, Dying Well

Presented by Kevin O'Neil, CSsR Associate Professor, Department of Systematic and Moral Theology
This presentation will focus on ethical issues at the end of life and how they also touch on issues that are at the heart of the moral life for the living as well as the dying.

Thursday, February 7

Repent and Live

Presented by James Wallace, CSsR Professor, Department of Word and Worship
The Lent and Easter cycle of Sunday readings provides encounters and images for preachers, teachers, and all of us to enrich our own lives. Attention will be given to some of these texts and some suggested ways to work with them, whether for self-enrichment or in serving others.

Thursday, March 6

Seeing Liturgically: The Arts in Christian Worship

Presented by Patrick Ellis, Ph.D Director of Arts for Theology and Ministry Program
Art and aesthetics in Christian liturgical traditions are not simply a matter of taste, but a theological and a teaching responsibility. This visual presentation will explore the history and development of liturgical art and aesthetics over the last fifty years.

Washington Theological Union, a Roman Catholic Graduate School of Theology and Ministry, educates men and women who seek further understanding of their faith and spirituality. Washington Theological Union has been in the Washington DC area for nearly forty years as a graduate level institution and a resource for the greater metropolitan community for spiritual enrichment.

Church of the Epiphany (Episcopal), located in downtown Washington, has an active ministry to workers. Noonday liturgies, a Tuesday concert series, and educational series throughout the year are ways this parish reaches out to the community.
